

New Career and Technical Student Organization at Lincoln High

Students attending Lincoln High School in the fall of 2017 have the opportunity to join a new Career and Technical Student Organization called “Educators Rising.” Educators Rising exists to help guide students toward a high-quality, hands-on exploration of teaching. As part of a national network, students will be able to build resources and create connections that may substantially impact their decision to teach. Educators Rising resources will be implemented into the elective course called “Teach and Lead;” however, any student with an interest in working with others or coaching in the future is encouraged to join. Student participants will take their first steps on the path to great teaching. Students will participate in the EdRising Virtual Campus, have scholarship opportunities, present at state and national competitions, and showcase their leadership opportunities.

National and State Competitions

Educators Rising competitions offer rising educators exciting, authentic opportunities to measure their creativity, skills, and initiative against high standards and their peers from across the country. Some states and regions hold preliminary rounds for competitions, and the final rounds take place on-site at the Educators Rising National Conference in June. This year, there are 19 competitions for high school and middle school students, as well as two for college students.

There’s Power in Teaching

Joining Educators Rising means students will be part of a nationwide network of more than 30,000 members in all 50 states – all committed to making sure that students develop the skills and knowledge needed to become great teachers. At the national level, Educators Rising supports the implementation of co-curricular high school programs where students explore the teaching profession and gain hands-on teaching experience. Through school-based programs, local partnerships, statewide programs, and national outreach efforts, teachers and school leaders are provided with the resources they need to help recruit and prepare the next generation of highly skilled educators.

About Educators Rising

Educators Rising – powered by PDK International – is transforming how America develops aspiring teachers. Starting with high school students, the organization provides passionate young people with hands-on teaching experience, sustains their interest in the profession, and helps them cultivate the skills they need to be successful educators. The result is a pipeline of accomplished teachers who are positioned to make a lasting difference – not only in the lives of their students, but also in the field of teaching more broadly.
