MORE Information:

In April 2015, K-12 Art Educators from the Wisconsin Rapids Public Schools, Port Edwards School District and Assumption High School were selected to create a handmade paper mural to be installed in the renovated Tribune Building. This project will be completed under the guidance of Artist Thomas Grade from Menasha, Wisconsin. Students in each of the districts will be studying various aspects of the south Wood County area such as its local industries, history, ethnic cultures and natural resources. They will design various symbols to be incorporated into a river scene made of stamped paper pulp and luan lumber.

This proposal was one of seven selected out of 111 total submissions from around the country, and is made possible through a creative placemaking grant from ArtPlace America, received by Incurage's Tribune Building Project in 2014. ArtPlace America's National Grants Program invests in creative placemaking projects where the arts play a central role in a community's planning and development strategies. Over 1,200 residents have participated in the Tribune Building Project process, and worked together to prioritize important community themes to be integrated into the building's design through various art mediums.
